Lofty ideals are rarely experienced without an outstanding, well thought through plan comprised of intentional practices which support the intended “one thing.”

Herman Bavinck, 1854-1921, Dutch Reformed Theologian

The faith that does not confess becomes shy, timid, retracts, begins to pine away, or is sometimes even discovered in its falseness and unfaithfulness. And the confession without faith is nothing more than a flower without a stem, it withers and falls to pieces. On the other hand, by and through confessing, faith gains in strength, power, and vitality, becomes more firmly founded, and shoots its root deeper and deeper into the ground of the heartland. By and through faith, confessing receives its animation and fire, gains in courage and freeness, and as by a secret, invisible flame, it is constantly preserved and fed.

We have no idea how wrong we are regarding the impact of the Word (truth/directing) without being coupled with coaching and support.

Richard Baxter

I frequently meet with those that have been my hearers (for) 8 or 10 years, who know not whether Christ be God or man...I have found by experience, that an ignorant man that hath been an unprofitable hearer so long, hath got more knowledge and remorse of conscience in half an hours close discourse, then they did from ten years hearing public preaching. I know that preaching of the Gospel publicly is the most excellent means, because we speak to many at once: But otherwise, it is usually far more effectual to preach it privately to a particular sinner.

Private instruction is “a more likely way to fill narrow mouth’d bottles (and such are the most of us) to take them [individually] in the hand, and pour water into them, than to set them altogether, and throw ever so much water upon them.”

Individually applying God’s Word is imperative for effective discipleship.

“Event” must always be coupled with “process”. Today, our western education has convinced us that power is in knowledge and, thus, feeling satisfied even though the “process” is left behind.

There are no life skills which are adequately taught without coaching (equipping).
